Although Japan had sent several warnings, most went unheeded. The lack of preparedness and most importantly the power of the Japanese military surprised Americans and caused great shock to the country. Another topic discussed in this article, and most interesting to note is how no one was ready for such an attack: ?hl=en&ie=UTF-8&q=pearl+harbor+1941#1 <http://hrtbun.com/node/10671> <http://hrtbun.com/node/10722> <http://hrtbun.com/node/10708> <http://hrtbun.com/node/10737> n/a: 0: 0: 9. 4: 8.3: 1,384: 0.0 hrtbun <http://hrtbun.com/node/10583> In fact, Pearl Harbor was attacked due to a strategic mistake made by the Japanese government that led to the attack, rather than a surprise attack by Japan's forces on Pearl Harbor from many miles away from Japan's shores. Japan's attack on Pearl Harbor was strategic and based on long-term planning by the Japanese government. In fact, it is imperative to acknowledge that no one in their right mind would stage a surprise attack from afar with the intention of putting themselves at risk of being killed in the process. A surprise attack from a distance is not an effective way to conduct war. In addition, this blog post discusses further how the most shocking aspect of the whole event was America's lack of readiness for such an assault: ?hl=en&ie=UTF-8&q=pearl+harbor#1 <http://hrtbun.com/node/10611> <http://hrtbun>.
